

September 27, 2016

GRUB STREET

7 Deeply Satisfying Dishes That Are Only Available at Midnight

New Yorkers are blessed to live in a city where late-night cravings need not go unsated. Burgers, oysters, ramen, halal-cart feasts, and diner specialties are all readily available, whether it's 4 p.m. or 4 a.m. But there's a smaller, more elusive group of foods only available in the middle of the night, specialty items that exist on late-night menus and nowhere else. Below, seven of the most interesting limited-edition options for the city that never sleeps.

Carne Asada

Where: Primal Cut

Price: $38

When: 11 p.m. to 3 a.m.

When executive chef Thomas Perone's new spot opens on East 60th Street this fall, it will offer a dry-aged New York Strip that's gotten a 48-hour bath in a secret-recipe marinade and is topped with chimichurri butter. (And, if you haven't gotten enough poke lately, Primal Cut will also offer a late-night salmon-poke-topped with pineapple, avocado, scallions, and sesame.)